

Hi Claire,

Thank you for bringing to our attention the article recently written on the website internassociation.ca. As a partner to many educational programs over the years, we take such concerns very seriously. Our objective has always been to offer students a valuable learning experience in the Publishing industry. We will revisit the posting for the Web Design intern to ensure that we are not misrepresenting the opportunity, however I assure you that the details are covered at length with the candidates during the application process. This particular internship program caters to graduating students, so any reference to desired experience and requirements are aligned to the profile of senior students interested in mentorship outside of the classroom, in a workplace environment.

Please don't hesitate to contact me with any further questions.

Kim Bill
Manager, Human Resources Canada / Responsable ressources humaines Canada 514.940.0751 ext. 3469
kim.bill@rd.com
www.readersdigest.ca

----- Forwarded by Adam Snellings/CA/ReadersDigest on 07/23/13 09:30 AM -----

Claire Seaborn <claire@internassociation.ca>

To adam.snellings@rd.com

cc

07/23/13 09:27 AM

Subject Wall of Shame

Dear Adam Snellings,

I would like to turn your attention to an article the Canadian Intern Association published yesterday regarding your advertisement for a "Print & Web Graphic Design Intern."

<http://www.internassociation.ca/readers-digest/>

Do not hesitate to contact me if you have any questions.

Claire Seaborn

President,
Canadian Intern Association